

Integrity Policy

By visiting this website, you accept that Swedish law applies for all issues concerning its content and use.

The content of this website is provided in its state. Bergendahls is not directly or indirectly responsible for damages or losses caused by the content of this website or of the content not being of use or accessible.

Links on this website to other websites do not mean that Bergendahls is associated with them or their owners.

Bergendahls reserve the right to, without due warning, change and correct this website.

When you submit personal data or other information via this website, you confirm your use of these in the way described below.

When you visit this website, Bergendahls or a third party will collect personal data and information about you without your actively disclosing it. As an example, Bergendahls uses Google Analytics (that stores IP-addresses among other things) as support to develop the content and functionality of the website.

Bergendahls or a third party may use text files saved on your computer as support in analysing how you use this website (so-called cookies). The information generated by such cookies (including your IP-address) may be stored by Bergendahls or a third party. You may deny the use of cookies using settings on your web browser, which may result in your not being able to access all functions on this website.

Bergendahls owns the right to use the above-mentioned information for those purposes described in this integrity policy and according to conditions for those services we provide. Bergendahls may e.g. use the information to adapt the website in order to meet your wishes regarding certain services, to communicate with you, to develop the content of the website, for statistics and analyses, as well as for marketing purposes.

Bergendahls owns the right to transfer personal data to another company within the group.

Bergendahls will safeguard your integrity and take measures of a reasonable degree to protect information against unauthorised access. You should however be aware that there is always a risk when sending information via the Internet.

You own the right to, without cost, once a year through a written application to Bergendahls partake in personal data concerning you stored by Bergendahls and how these are handled. You own the right to correct the personal data that is stored about you.

Bergendahls reserves the right to, at any time, change this integrity policy.

Questions about or comments regarding Bergendahls' integrity policy are answered via info@bergendahls.se or +460451-480 00.